Training Terms and Conditions

Resident, regional and customer-site training is subject to our terms and conditions.

Advantages of Training

University Training can help you to quickly maximize your return on investment with:

- Greater success in configuring and customizing the application to meet your specific business needs.
- Shorter time to production when your staff is knowledgeable and comfortable with installing, configuring, and using the application.
- Faster problem resolution when your support staff has been trained in diagnosing issues and applying a comprehensive troubleshooting methodology.

Advantages of Training at Your Location

University training can be conducted at your facility. The on-site option provides the following advantages:

- We will work with you in advance to tailor the course to your implementation needs.
- You can quickly bring your entire team or support staff up to speed at one time. In addition, they can train together, interactively sharing and role-playing how they will work with the product in your environment.
- Your staff saves travel time and expense.

Planning Your Onsite Training

Because of the emphasis on hands-on exercises in most of our courses, we ask that your training facility student computers, and training room network meet certain minimum technical standards. When we begin planning your onsite training, we will also send you a set of guidelines.
